Dr. Yanch is available for individual meetings from 10 am – 2 pm on November 3 at the Chamblee campus or by telephone bridge. Please contact Dolly Sinha (sds2@cdc.gov) for more information.

NCEH/ATSDR Office of Science proudly presents:

2010 NCEH/ATSDR Director's Science Seminar Series

"Health Effects of Radiation in the Environment: Where We've Got it Wrong and Why it Matters"

Jacquelyn C. Yanch, PhD

Director for Research, BioMed Software, Inc.

Visiting Faculty Member, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

November 3, 2010

2:30 – 4:00 pm

Chamblee Campus

Building 106, Conference Room 1A/1B

Jacquelyn Yanch has spent almost thirty years working with ionizing radiation. She is currently Director of Research for BioMed Software, Inc., developing dosimetry tools and radiation dose tracking strategies for use in medical imaging. Dr. Yanch spent 21 years on the faculty in the Nuclear Science and Engineering Department at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where her research involved development and characterization of radiation sources, novel radiation therapies, experimental and calculational dosimetry, and radiobiological and medical imaging investigations.

This presentation will be broadcast on IPTV and LiveMeeting.
